

Please do not enact any Federal Regulations that would weaken the effect of the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law. Before this law took effect in Indiana, my wife and I were receiving six to 10 unsolicited telemarketing calls each evening and several during the day. Some of these calls were as late as 10:30 PM. After signing-up for protection under the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law we now receive less than one unsolicited telemarketing call in the evening and rarely get one a week during the day. My understanding is that the Federal Regulation will permit calls from anyone with whom we have an account. This is not nearly enough protection from these annoying calls. The Indiana Law works. I suggest that if you decide to make a Federal Regulation on this matter, that you copy the Indiana Law.

Marshall Anderson